

The BPD Foundation is running an anti-stigma campaign as part of the upcoming Borderline Personality Disorder (BPD) Awareness Week (October 1 – 7), with the aim to help decrease the stigma and discrimination people living with BPD often face. The campaign is called KNOW BPD, NO STIGMA and aims to educate and inform people about what BPD truly is and hopefully encourage compassion, empathy, and increase the quality of treatment and understanding for people living with this disorder.

To make the campaign as engaging and effective as possible, the BPD Foundation would like to hear from clinicians about their beliefs regarding BPD and its treatment. The survey responses will be used to inform and expand the KNOW BPD, NO STIGMA campaign. The survey is confidential, and will take about 10 minutes to complete.

The survey is completed online, and accessed via this link:

Clinicians

<https://goo.gl/forms/AzgLCwPo9lydAw3C2>

Please contact bpdawarenessweek@gmail.com for questions or comments.