

Sexuality, Personal Identity and Impulsivity in People with Borderline Personality Disorder: Research Study

Adults with a current diagnosis of Borderline Personality Disorder are invited to take part in a research study looking at the relationship between personal identity, impulsivity, and sexuality.

Participation will involve completing an online survey which will take approximately 20 minutes.

There is also the opportunity those who identify as sexually diverse (e.g. being same-sex attracted, identifying as lesbian, gay, homosexual, bisexual, queer, etc., or are in a relationship with another individual of the same-sex) to participate in a follow-up interview about their experiences of being sexually diverse and receiving treatment for Borderline Personality Disorder.

The information from this survey will be used to inform the best-practice for assessment and treatment of individuals with Borderline Personality Disorder, particularly at Spectrum, the State-wide Specialist service for Personality Disorders.

This study is being conducted by Eastern Health in conjunction with Deakin University. This study has been approved by the Eastern Health Human Research Ethics Committee [App #E18-2017].

If you would like to participate in the current study, please visit the website below or contact:

<http://bit.ly/SexualityBPD>

spectrum.research@easternhealth.org.au with "Sexuality and BPD" in the subject